As part of its ongoing initiative on gender-responsive NAP processes, the NAP Global Network has undertaken a systematic review of NAP documents posted on the UNFCCC’s NAP Central to assess the integration of gender considerations.

The document reviews explored how gender considerations have been addressed in the documents, as well as how women are positioned. It is important to note that most of the documents do not include much detail on the process undertaken to develop the NAP document or on strategies for implementation and M&E. Consequently, a lack of evidence in the document does not necessarily mean that gender hasn’t been considered in a particular aspect of the NAP process—it may simply indicate a lack of documentation or that there is additional work to be done to elaborate on particular aspects of the plan.

Below is a summary of the review of Chad’s NAP document.

<td>Summary of gender references</td>
<td>One of the five objectives of the NAP is to integrate gender considerations into the development and implementation of adaptation measures. The NAP also highlights gender sensitivity as a cross-cutting issue following the guiding principles defined by the convention. It mentions that gender inequalities are very pronounced in Chad and that gendered vulnerabilities need to be considered in adaptation. It also identifies gender and social protection as a priority area of intervention. A few solutions are proposed to integrate gender, such as the development of gender-sensitive tools for the planning and execution of adaptation actions, the development of a disaggregated database or activities to challenge negative social norms.</td>
